lab[au]: pixflow #2

pixflow #2 is a generative artwork by belgium's lab[au] which features flows of pixels spread across four displays, determined by a field of vectors which shape the paths of the pixels. the piece is thus determined by the relationship between the pixels and the vectors making the flow different all the time. the movements are organic and always in flux. the pattern is displayed on a four screen display that is arranged vertically. the piece is powered by 4 networked computers that communicate with each other.
